This week we travelled forward in time to winter. We discussed the different types of weather we may see in the winter as well as different activities we might do.

The children kicked off their week by performing a science experiment where they created pipe cleaner Christmas ornaments and observed as borax crystals grew on them.

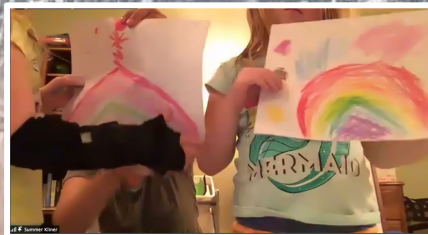

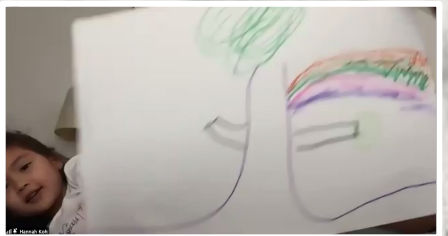

The children also created snowflakes using popsicle sticks, glitter, and other fun decor.

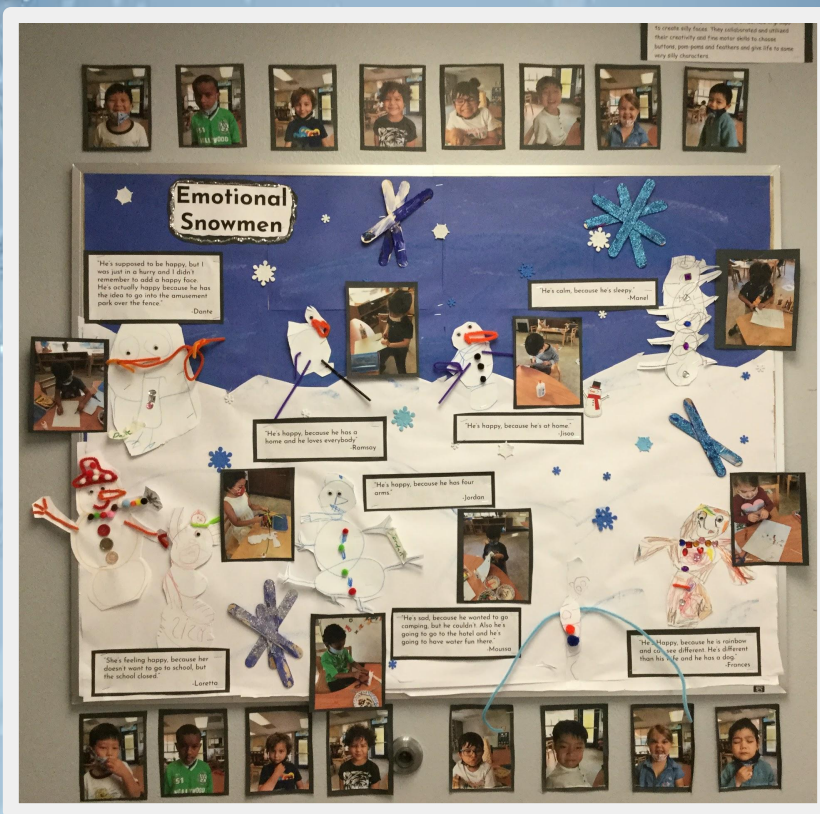

This week was a fun filled week all about winter and light. The children were introduced to the winter season and how it differs from winter in other states. The children had fun drawing what they enjoy doing during winter.

As part of this week's winter theme, the children had fun creating their very own snowmen. These wonderful snowmen were assigned emotions and short descriptions explaining why they were feeling those specific emotions. This fun activity allowed the children to explore their creativity while identifying emotions and the facial expressions that we use to convey them.
